Mexico is a country where six percent of its population faces daily physical barriers that limit their mobility and participation in society. It's time to create a more inclusive environment that recognizes these difficulties and provides a solution.

Accessible tourism is not only good for people with disabilities or special needs, it's good for everyone

We offer travel experiences designed for all people, allowing them to explore the world without barriers or limits.

My name is Sofia Rojas, and with my team, I will present our solution for this issue. We have designed a website where people, primarily those who suffer from some form of disability, can enjoy travel, knowing that the destination is accessible to them. This also saves them time, which they can use for other activities, as we understand that finding an inclusive place can be a bit challenging."

In the website, we find the destination with the seal of 'inclusive tourism'. This means that the place offers all the services necessary for a person with a disability to enjoy the trip without any trouble

Our website operates on a commission basis for all reserved trips. The 13 percent of the total cost is the platform's profit margin.
